

Protection for your mortgage

Critical Illness Insurance

If you're diagnosed with cancer, or have a heart attack or stroke, it's important you focus on recovering and not how to pay your mortgage.

Andrew and Breana own term life insurance to cover their mortgage if one of them died prematurely. But what would happen if Andrew or Breana suffered a heart attack?

Thanks to early detection and advanced medical care, more people survive a critical illness than ever before. But survival can come with financial costs and uncertainty.

Critical illness insurance can help remove financial stress while you're recovering from cancer, heart attack, stroke or a number of other serious conditions or medical procedures.

Think about the difference it could make for this couple. A critical illness insurance policy with a $36,000 cash benefit would cover their $1,500 mortgage for two years, if one of them suffered a critical illness. The cost to protect both Andrew and Breana can be just over 2 dollars a day.*
